

Warden Message – U.S. Embassy, Quito, Ecuador
Volcano Tungurahua at State of Heightened Activity

November 26, 2010

The U.S. Embassy in Quito advises U.S. citizens living or traveling in Ecuador that after a large eruption on Monday evening, in which ash was blown six kilometers into the sky, the volcano Tungurahua, in central Ecuador, remains at a state of heightened activity. To date, there are no reports of American citizens affected by the volcanic activity, but a number of homes and small towns have been evacuated.

If traveling to the area around Tungurahua and the town of Baños, American citizens are asked to use good judgment and take all appropriate safety measures as volcanic conditions can change rapidly.

Because Ecuador is in a region of frequent volcanoes and earthquakes, Americans are advised to keep extra food and water in their homes, and consider purchasing dust masks and heavy gloves to protect hands during ash clean-up.

The U.S. Embassy continues to monitor the situation and will keep you apprised of new information.

For more information on current activity, visit the website of the Instituto Geofísico which monitors volcanoes and earthquakes.
